Northeast Utilities states that they cannot afford to "do it right" by paying for an unbiased EIS study. They prefer to save money by trashing our state with 19th century technology. While crying poor mouth they are at the same time paying outrageous sums to buy up land to finish the nothern 40 miles of their supposed route. It is time for the DOE to achnowledge that these are excuses and not reasons being offered by NU's for its refusal to do the proper and decent thing and bury the lines down public ways approved by the state of NH.
